

Innovation in online study

UIPM (Universal Institute of Professional Management) has been the leading innovator of flexible study for over 17 years because we're committed to helping busy adults study from anywhere. Online study can also be referred to as 'distance education' (sometimes also off-campus education, or external study) and provides an opportunity for you to study without having to physically attend a campus.

How it works

Instead of turning up to a lecture on-campus at a designated time, the course content is provided online for you to access when it suits you each week. It might be a podcast (recorded lecture), a set of readings, questions posed in a discussion board, an online quiz or a video. Your lecturer will guide you through the unit with a weekly plan of study , as well as checking in on the discussion boards or forums. You can communicate with teaching staff via skype, email, online chat or virtual campus on secondlife, etc
